

Organization is key in 5th grade. As an upcoming 5th grader, there are some things for you to remember. You have many different notebooks and books. It may be a little confusing at first, but I'm here to help. Different items stay in different rooms and we even have certain seats.

In 5th grade every student has three classes, each with their own particular spaces for things. Each class has different notebooks, books, and places to put said books. In every class put your personal (as in personal items for school) where you're told to. In science class we have boxes for our community supplies that Ms. L provides for us. We also have cubbies for our notebooks and science books. In Math class Mrs. E has provided us with pockets on the back of our chairs for our notebooks and if you're in her class a pencil bag. In Mrs. H's class we have baskets for our notebooks, and our reading bags. So whenever you get a direction to put anything up, it goes in any of those spots.

5th grade classes have different supplies. We need to keep our work organized so we can find it and keep it safe and in good condition. In fifth grade you are responsible for your things. So, if you lose something it's your fault. All of the teachers are organized and you should be to!

Organization/Purpose – 4+

- Effective introduction and conclusion "Organization is key in 5th grade".
- Strong maintained focus – to be organized
- Connection between ideas and in overall paper "In Mrs. E class, In Mrs. H's class..."

Evidence/Elaboration – 3+

- Uses effective style to enhance content "All of the teachers are organized and you should be to!" and "It may be a little confusing at first, but I'm here to help".
- Uses specific examples – cubbies, boxes, chair pockets etc.

Conventions – 2

- Few errors—misuse of commas, some capitalization errors after the parentheses